BULLETIN

OF THE

CANADIAN SOCIETY OF BIBLICAL STUDIES

No. 28

•

1968

I PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS

First Century Aramaic and the Targums - Ernest G. Clarke

Preface:

The 1968 Bulletin is finally ready for distribution. May it serve as a reminder of the very fine meeting held at St. Michael's College in May. To those members who were unable to attend, may it serve as enticement for personal participation another year.

As has become our custom, the Bulletin includes (1) the full text of the Presidential Address, (2) abstracts of other papers, (3) the proceedings of the Society.

Many thanks to the members who furnished this material.

Waterloo Lutheran University Waterloo, Ontario Norman E. Wagner Secretary-Treasurer Since the textual discoveries at Qumran and at other Palestinian sites the question of the languages spoken in Palestine in the First Century A.D. has become much more complex. No longer is it possible to argue for the exclusive use of either Hebrew or Aramaic as did Segal and Dalman.¹ The discoveries bear witness to the common use of four languages in first century Palestine. Greek was the speech of the educated and hellenized: "the medium of cultural and commercial intercourse between Jew and foreigner."² Latin was the language of law and the military. Hebrew continued to be the language of Scripture. Aramaic was the language of some groups in Palestine (i.e. in Judaea and Galilee).

Segal (in 1927) argued³ strongly, against Dalman, that there was not enough valid textual evidence in Aramaic to conclude that Aramaic was the exclusive language of the Jews in Judaea during the time of Jesus. His conclusion was that the most the evidence could prove was that during this period Aramaic was understood and used in Palestine. Segal maintained that the people of Judaea spoke a vernacular Hebrew while the Galilaeans spoke Aramaic. He made no distinction between vernacular Hebrew and Mishnaic Hebrew both of which developed naturally from the language of the Old Testament. Segal rejected the thesis that the Hebrew of the first century was exclusively an artificial language, developed out of classical Hebrew under Aramaic influence for the use of the rabbis.

Harris Birkeland⁴ presented the thesis that Hebrew was the language of the ordinary people (am ha'ares) in both Judaea and Galilee. In contrast to the uneducated Jew the upper classes spoke Aramaic and Greek. He maintained that this Hebrew dialect was close to but different from Mishnaic Hebrew.

In the Old Testament itself we find second century B.C. books such as Koheleth in Hebrew. Daniel from the same general period is preserved in both Hebrew and Aramaic. At Masada⁵ a Hebrew text for Ecclesiasticus consisting of 26 fragments has been receovered by Yadin's expedition. The majority of the texts from Qumran, which cannot be dated later than 70 A.D., are in Hebrew. Hebrew was certainly much more extensively used in first century Palestine than we were often prepared to admit previously. M. Wilcox⁶ comments in this connection: "With regard to the matter of language, we ought to note that the discovery of the Dead Sea Scrolls has now placed at our disposal information of a highly interesting and relevant nature.... The non-biblical texts show us a free, living language, and attest the fact that in New Testament times, and for some considerable time previously, Hebrew was not confined to rabbinical circles... but appeared as a normal vehicle of expression." The Mishnah, from 200 A.D., was written in Hebrew, with some Aramaic words and phrases. Jewish commentaries on the Pentateuch such as Bereschit Rabba are written in Hebrew but with many passages in Aramaic.⁷

2.

The textual evidence which we are now able to assemble sustains the position held by Segal. It is not a question of either Hebrew or Aramaic being the spoken language of the time of Jesus. Hebrew maintains a viable position. In fact, Grintz⁸ has put forward the thesis that Hebrew remained a living language most likely until 135 A.D. Although, certainly the use of Aramaic was increasing. Aramaisms continued to infiltrate in an increasingly greater way into the world of the Old Testament.⁹

The argument that Hebrew was preserved only as a book language has been refuted by the non-sacred textual evidence from such sites as Qumran. At Murabba'at we have letters written by Bar Koseba in both Hebrew and Aramaic (5 in Hebrew and 10 in Aramaic).

There is still much research to be done on the type of Hebrew we find in these new texts in order to understand its development and relationship to late biblical Hebrew, on the one hand, and to Mishnaic Hebrew, on the other hand.

At the same time we must recognize the extensive use of Greek in the first century. In the nineteenth century A. Roberts and T.K. Abbott argued that Christ spoke Greek.¹⁰ In this century S. Lieberman¹¹ and others have extended the thesis. In the world of trade and commerce Greek was an economic necessity.¹² The ossuary inscriptions from "Dominus Flevit" number 7 in Hebrew, 11 in Aramaic and 11 in Greek.¹³ The same facts are to be noted at Murabba'at where letters of Bar Koseba are in Greek as well as Hebrew and Aramaic. Also found at Murabba'at are ostraca in Greek and Greek papyri one of which is dated 124 A.D.

Apropos of the question of Latin in Palestine this was probably confined to the army and its services. Latin inscriptions on milestones and direction indicators on road signs in the Jerusalem area have been uncovered.¹⁴ We also find Latin loan words in the Mishnah and in the New Testament.¹⁵

In actual fact, however, although we may speak of a tri-lingualism among the ordinary people for all practical purposes we find a bi-lingualism of Hebrew and Aramaic. This is exactly the same situation as existed in the time of Nehemiah.

In turning to consider Aramaic we find that its use as a spoken language is not new in the first century. Already in the pre-exilic period of the eighth century B.C. we know that Aramaic was known at least among the upper classes. In II Kings 18:26-28 (cf. Isaiah 36:11-13) we have recorded an incident in the reign of Hezekiah when the Jerusalem official Eliakim requested Rabshakeh, Sennacherib's emmisary, to speak in Aramaic rather than in Hebrew so that the common people ('am ha'ares) would not understand.

By the time of E ra-Nehemiah in the fifth century B.C. there was a strong bilingualism in evidence. Nehemiah 13:24 condemns the children who spoke the language of Ashdod (possibly an Aramaic dialect) but not the language of the Jews. Much interest in earlier generations was focused on the question of the language Jesus spoke and on the possibility of an Aramaic original for the Gospels and Acts.

The names of Wellhausen and Nestle¹⁶ come immediately to mind. Wellhausen thought Mark to be a translation from an Aramaic original but was less certain of the Gospel of John since it was so different from Mark. Dalman, Burney, and Torrey¹⁷ continued these earlier studies but with greater emphasis on the linguistic evidence. Dalman narrowed his analysis to the words of Jesus. He selected certain main concepts such as Kingdom of God, Father in Heaven and elucidated them in the light of Jewish antecedents and parallels. Burney made a detailed study of the language of the Fourth Gospel in order to prove that it was virtually a translation into Greek. Torrey, on the other hand argued that the Fourth Gospel was actually translated into Greek.

I do not intend to become involved, in this paper, with the question of what language Jesus spoke. The new textual evidence of the past twenty years does provide us with precise controllable material for re-opening the discussion.¹⁸

At the same time we now have available some excellent Aramaic textual material. Before 1947 there was no extended literature in Palestinian Aramaic except the Megillat Ta'anith.¹⁹ There were also ossuary inscriptions from Jerusalem, many of which consisted of proper names only. There was the Uzziah slab from the first century A.D. and the Qorban inscription on an ossuary lid. In addition, we had the letters of Gamaliel^{II} (ca. 110 A.D.) written to Jews living in Judaea, Galilee, and Babylon concerning the observation of religious feasts.

Now, after 1947, we have much more material in Palestinian Aramaic. It is not only more extensive in form but it is religious in genre. This new material is certainly more useful in many ways than the isolated proper names on ossuary lids. Furthermore, the texts are dateable to a period roughly first century B.C. to first century A.D. We are certain that the locale is Palestine. Not only is this material valuable for the linguistic study of Aramaic but it is very important for the ideas it contains-ideas contemporary with the New Testament.

From Qumran we have four documents in Aramaic, belonging to the genre of commentaries. The Genesis Apocryphon (1Q Gen. Apoc) is valuable in any study of the history of Targum and Midrash and the relationship between these two genre. M.A. Lehman²⁰ writes: "This scroll fits squarely into the mainstream of Targumim and Midrashim, and probably represents the oldest prototype of both available to us." There are five complete columns preserved and seventeen others in a fragmentary state. In the first part of the text the discussion centres on Genesis 6-9. Lamech becomes concerned whether his son Noah has been begotten by him or by some supernatural power such as the Watchers. Methuselah and Enoch are consulted for an opinion on the paternity. This section has many parallels in the Book of Enoch 106-107. The second part of the text deals with Genesis 12 and 14-15. Column XIX begins with Abram's flight to Egypt. He had a dream in which he saw "a cedar very beautiful; and some men came intending to cut down and uproot the cedar but leave the date-palm by itself" (X1X 14-15). The date-palm (Sarah) intercedes for the cedar (Abram). Abram urges Sarah to say that he is her brother. Example 1 on the accompanying paradigm shows that the Targums agree with the MT whereas the 1Q Gen. Apoc. agrees with the phrasing in the Abimelech incident in Genesis 20:13. In column XX there is an extensive description of Sarah's beauty²¹ which finds no parallel in the Old Testament. This is the type of haggadh with which we are familiar in rabbinic writings. Parallels to this second section are to be found in the Book of Jubilees.

The second Aramaic text is from Qumran cave 11. It is a Targum of Job 17:14-26:33 and 37:10-42:11. It is the most extensive targum to date and is very old. The cave 11 targum is literal without long paraphrases. And yet it is not merely translation because there is also interpretation. We see this when we compare the MT and Targum to Job 38:7:

MT

11 Q Tg Job

When the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy?

When the morning stars were shining together and all the angels of God were shouting together?

The third Aramaic text is another Job Targum in two fragments from cave 4.

Finally, from Qumran cave 4 we have another targum. This time Levitics 16:12-15,18-21. Other Aramaic texts from Qumran represent extra-biblical religious material which is valuable for linguistic as well as religious studies.

Kutscher²² asked the question: "what did the Aramaic written (and spoken?) in Palestine at a certain period preceding Middle Aramaic look like?" This material from Qumran helps us answer that question and to describe the character of first century Aramaic. Both grammar and vocabulary of the Aramaic of this period is becoming more fully known. Eventually it will be possible for those scholars who would like to reconstruct the language(s) spoken in Jesus' day to do so with much more surety.

Another valuable contribution drawn from this material concerns the character of the first century targums. The Leviticus targum from Qumran refutes the arguments that the writing of an Aramaic version of the Pentateuch was late. Vermes²³ underlines this fact in reference to 1Q Gen. Apoc. which he says "offers important evidence of the early targumic versions of Genesis" dating before 70 A.D. The Qumran targumic material for the Pentateuch supports a position taken by Olmstead²⁴ in 1942 when he maintained that since we have evidence of an early targum to the Hagiographa there would most likely be even earlier targums to the Pentateuch and Prophets. Furthermore, both the Job and Leviticus targums from Qumran demonstrate how literal early targums were although they also included interpretation of the Hebrew text. This in turn throws into perspective the whole question of the formation and tramsmission of the several extant targums which we possessed before Qumran.²⁵

Before Qumran we had available the Targum Onkelos on the Pentateuch published in the Rabbinic Bibles and in the Polyglotts. This was the official targum to Torah. Dalman used Onkelos as the basis for his discussion of Palestinian Aramaic. We now know the problem not to be so simple and straight forward. The present text of Onkelos reflects a Babylonian recension which probably did not reach Palestine much before the end of the first millenium A.D.²⁶ The idea that Onkelos having orginated in Palestine was revised in Babylon is argued by Kutscher, Wernberg-Møller, Diez Macho and Vermes.²⁷ In contrast Kahle, taking his lead from Geiger, argued for a Babylonian origin for Targum Onkelos and therefore, he dismissed any merit in using Onkelos as evidence for Palestinian Aramaic. Recently a lively debtate ensued between Kutscher and Kahle.²⁸ Kahle objected to Kutscher's method of dating 1Q Gen. Apoc. and his rejection of the Palestinian targums as containing first-rate evidence for Palestinian Aramaic of Jesus' time.

We now recognize the importance of the Palestinian targumic material along with the Qumran texts for any study of Palestinian Aramaic. At the same time the nature of the contents of Targum Onkelos and its relationship to the Palestinian oriented traditions²⁹ of the Palestinian targums is ripe for renewed study. The change in emphasis is easily observed in the three editions of Matthew Black's An Aramaic Approach to the Gospels and Acts. First published in 1946 his third edition in 1967 contains an extensive new chapter on the new Palestinian targum material available.

In addition to Onkelos there is the Targum Pseudo-Jonathan (Ps.J), the Fragmentary Targum or Jerusalem 11 (Fg.T 11) and the targumic texts from the Cairo Geniza. These all reflect a Palestinian origin. Pseudo-Jonathan is an authentic Palestinian targum. The language is Palestinian Aramaic which was later influenced by Onkelos. It is also a complete targum to the Pentateuch. It is less a translation than a paraphrase containing long and extensive digressions. It contains much haggadic material and reflects an exegesis of the Old Testament contemporary with the New Testament. At the same time we argue for the antiquity of this targum³⁰ we recognize many later additions which had persuaded scholars of an earlier generation to date the whole targum late.

The problem of the relationship of Pseudo-Jonathan to Onkelos has vexed scholars. Many³¹ have argued that Pseudo-Jonathan is simply Onkelos with Palestinian targumic fragments inserted in order to preserve them. A second group, including Ginsberger, Block and Diez Macho have argued³² that Pseudo-Jonathan is an authentic Palestinian targum which has been retouched under the influence of Onkelos. Vermes³³ representing a third position has written a very valuable study of the problem based on Genesis 4:3-16 which is represented in several Palestinian targums. He has argued that Onkelos is a revised version of a proto-Pseudo-Jonathan. Hence Onkelos and Pseudo-Jonathan have developed from a common Palestinian targum tradition.

Further witness to Palestinian targum tradition is found in the Fragmentary targum (Fg.T 11) preserving some 800 verses of the Pentateuch. This was printed in the Rabbinic Bible and in the London Polyglott. The date for this targum in its present recension is 7th-8th century A.D. It is less influenced by Onkelos than it is by Pseudo-Jonathan as far as vocabulary is concerned. Grammatically the situation is more complex and there appears to be normalization under the influence of Onkelos and the Babylonian Talmud. There are a number of MSS of the Fragmentary targum which were used in an edition by M. Ginsberger.

From the Cairo Geniza Kahle published in 1930³⁴ fragments from 7 MSS which reflect a number of recensions of the Palestinian targum. Although the present manuscript material can be dated between the 7th-9th centuries A.D. the contents reflect a much earlier stage in the development of the Palestinian targum.

Then in 1956 Diez Macho discovered in the Vatican Library a complete Palestinian targum MS of the Pentateuch (Neofiti 1) with much valuable marginalia.³⁵ This is a Ms of 449 folios on parchment. The codicil indicates the date 1504 A.D.³⁶ There are at least three scribal hands to be distinguished. While the present recension of Neofiti 1 "is from later and talmudic times the basis for Neofiti is very old."³⁷ Le Déaut³⁸ would include Neofiti 1, on the basis of content, in the scheme of Palestinian targums assigning it to the same family as the Fragmentary targums and the Cairo Geniza material. Although the Palestinian targum may never have had a uniform fixed text like the one we know for Onkelos we are able to identify four "families" of Palestinian targumic material: (1) Neofiti 1; (2) the Cairo Geniza texts; (3) Ms 110 from the National Library in Paris; (4) the Fragmentary targum represented by MSS Vaticanus 440, Leipzig 1 and Nurenburg 1.³⁹ In addition we now possess in Pseudo-Jonathan and Neofiti 1 two complete targums of the Pentateuch of Palestinian locale.

The Palestinian targum as witnessed in these four families of recensions certainly was a public targum which existed openly until Onkelos was officially accepted toward the end of the first millenium A.D. At the same time we must recognize that some normalization took place in these Palestinian targums after Onkelos was accepted. The Palestinian targum is therefore of primary importance in the history of the formation and transmission of the targums. Furthermore, since much of the material in the Palestinian targum is pre-Christian or at least first or second century, it is a valuable witness to the exegetical background of the New Testament.

In conclusion, there are certain specific observations we can draw from a comparative study of the Palestinian targum traditions. The Targumic recensions which we have available (demonstrated on the accompanying paradigm by Ps J, Fg.T, N, Ngl and 1Q Gen. Apoc.) tell us that there is no uniform unique text of the Palestinian targums but rather a fund of common tradition. R. Block⁴⁰ states in this regard that we possess "un ensemble de recensions dont la forme et le détail sont tres variables." Therefore the first presupposition we must accept in this area of study is not to search for nor to reconstruct a unique text - a vorlage. All we possess is a common tradition transmitted orally in the synagogue.

Our study of the common Palestinian tradition is further complicated by the normalizing influence of the MT, especially on Onkelos, but also to a lesser degree on PsJ and the other Palestinian targums. There are instances in Onkelos where the aramaic text has conformed to the MT to such an extent that Onkelos reproduced even the exact number of syllables and words found in the Palestinian targums. Because of the homiletical emphasis in the Palestinian targums one can observe the development of midrash in them through an extensive use of haggadah. These facts are domonstrated in Genesis 15: 1 (Example 7). Onkelos is completely normalized in terms of the MT. At the same time the final words of PsJ also reflects this same process. PsJ, Fg.T from the Cairo Geniza and N reflect the common Palestinian tradition. I personally would be inclined to accept the Fg.T, supported by the Ngl, as the earliest stage of Palestinian targum development. However, even if we do not go that far we are able to observe the Palestinian targum tradition in relation to the later development in Onkelos.

Genesis 13:7 (example 3) is even a better example of the editorial process. The variation between the three Palestinian targums reflects the common tradition. The Fg.T and N reflect an earlier stage in the tradition which PsJ rearranged but in a rather awkward manner resulting in a certain redundancy. The Ng1 "for until" improves N in reference to the Fg.T.

Secondly, a study of the material indicates its importance for a fuller understanding of Aramaic vocabulary, grammar and syntax. The study of the new material from such sites as Qumran as well as a renewed study of the Aramaic parts of the Palestinian Talmud, as R. Block notes⁴¹, will be illuminating.

The second example in the accompanying paradigm from Genesis 6:14 concerns the phrase "an ark of gopher wood". The Hebrew word gopher is a hapax in the MT. The versions have attempted different explanations.⁴² R. Nathan (ca. 170 A.D.) in Bereschit Rabba 31 explained the phrase as "an ark of cedar trees" using the Aramaic word, 113'77P. This is a very rare word and only found in Tanhuma and Beshallah 24 to Exodus 15:25 and in the Palestinian targums to Genesis 6:14. Onkelos uses a different word for cedar (OI77P). Pseudo-Philo (arca de lignis cedrinis) and Symmachus (EK Schwv Kzópírwv) also agree with the Palestinian targums. This shows that the Palestinian targum reading was current in the first-second century A.D.⁴³

In Genesis 14:4 (example 4) we notice that both N and 1Q Gen. Apoc. XX1 27 read: "rebelled against him". The Aramaic idiom is 2772. Onkelos may have dropped the phrase in order to normalize the text in reference to the MT - a feature which we have already noted in Onkelos.

A third value gained from the comparative study of the Palestinian targums is a better understanding of early rabbinic theology. In earlier studies such as G.F. Moore's Judaism (1927) there was no serious attempt to establish a chronology for the texts being used. R. Block and G. Vermes⁴⁴ have shown us, in their several studies, the greater values gained from subjecting the texts to an historical sequence. Genesis 15:1 is valuable in a study of merit theology, involving the righteousness of Abraham. Genesis 14:18 (example 6) concerns the geneology of Melchizedek. In 1Q Gen. Apoc. XX11 14, Melchizedek is called the king of Salem. A few lines earlier Salem is identified with 6.

Jerusalem. In Hebrews 7: 1-2 Melchizedek is described as "king of peace" Basideus Elphrys). We cannot be sure whether the author of Hebrews knew a midrashic tradition or did he recognize slm as an adjective.45

All the Palestinian targums, as well as 1Q Gen. Apoc. identify Melchizedek as King of Jerusalem which M. Black⁴⁶ finds to be an anti-Samaritan attitude. It would be inconceivable to have Melchizedek, priest of the Most High God, worshipping at Salim north-east of Nablus. Next, Melchizedek offered "bread and wine " which 1Q Gen. Apoc. reads "food and drink" suggesting to us that this was an offering of sustenance and had no sacrificial implications. The author of Hebrews, who was interested in the idea of the priestly sacrifice of Christ, also seems unaware of any sacrificial nuance in Genesis. Cyprian was the first to introduce the sacrificial idea.47 The use of the word khn in 1Q Gen. Apoc. is evidence against Zeitlin's argument that khn is a Hebrew loan word.47a Onkelos, on the other hand, avoided the use of this word which leads M. Black 48 to explain it as another anti-Samaritan trait. Be that as it may, the use of khn is important in the Palestinian targums since Abram received Melchizedek's blessing.

Finally, a significant contribution is gained from the comparative study of the Palestinian targums in the light they shed on the background of New Testament exegesis. We cite two examples: Genesis 6:8 and 9:6. In Genesis 6:8 (example 8) Noah finds grace and favour because there is "none other righteous man in his generation." In the Palestinian targums verse 8 is tied in more closely with verse 9 than in the MT. This seems to be the background of 11 Peter 2:5 saying that Noah was "a preacher of righteousness" and Hebrews 11:7 writing "heir of the righteousness."

Genesis 9:6 (example 9) is closely related to Matthew 5:21: "You have heard that it was said to men of old: 'You shall not kill, and whoever kills shall be liable to the judgment.' "The first part of Jesus' words are clearly identified with Exodus 20:13 (cf. Deuteronomy 5:18). The sanction expressed in the second part of the phrase cannot be directly identified with any Old Testament text. Scholars have made reference to Exodus 21:12, Leviticus 24:17,21, Numbers 25:16ff where the murderer is said to pay for his crime by being put to death. But where is this reference to "judgment"? The sources quoted by Strack-Billerbeck⁴⁹, at this point, are all from the third and fourth centuries A.D. Mekilta, Bahodesh 850 on Exodus 20:13, explains the command "You shall not kill" by Genesis 9:6. Murder is comparable to destroying the image. Philo⁵¹ and R. Akiba in Bereschit Rabba³⁴ take exactly the same position based on Genesis 9:6. When we turn to the Palestinian targums and Onkelos we find Matthew 5:21 fully exaplined. According to the targums the murderer is to be brought to judgment. In Matthew 5:21 "he is liable to the judgment". I submit that the targums, at this point, retain an interpretation contemporary with the New Testament. 52

Footnotes

| | Die Worte Jesu (Leipzig, 1939 ²) |
|-----|--|
| 2. | M. Black: An Aramaic Approach pg. 15. |
| 3. | Segal, op. cit., pg. 16. |
| 4. | H. Birkeland: The Language of Videnskaps Akademi i Oslo II Hi |
| 5. | Y. Yadin: "The Excavation of M (1965), pg. 1-120 |
| 6. | M. Wilcox: The Semitisms of Ac |
| 7. | H. Odeberg: The Aramaic Portio Arsskrift N.F Avd.1 Bd 36 Nr. 3 |
| 8. | J. M. Grintz: "Hebrew as the s of the Second Temple", Journal |
| 9. | M. Wagner: Die lexikalischen u alttestamentlichen Hebraisch, B |
| 10. | A. Roberts: The Language of Ch on the Original Text of the Old |
| 11. | S. Lieberman: Greek in Jewish |
| 12. | B.M. Metzger: The New Testamen (Nashville 1965), pg. 32. |
| 13. | R. de Vaux: review of B. Bogat Flevit" La Necropoli del periodo 299-301; and A.H. Gundry: "The JBL, 83 (1964), pg. 404-408 (40) |
| 14. | Lieberman: op. cit., pg. 67. |
| 15. | C.F.D. Moule: An Idiom Book of G. Dalman: Jesus-Jeschua (Leipz Josephus, The Wars of the Jews |
| 16. | J. Wellhausen: Einleitung in di E. Nestle: Philologica Sacra (E |
| 17. | G. Dalman: op. cit. ; C.F. Burne (Oxford 1922), The Poetry of our |

- 18. Black: op. cit., pg. 47 and all of chpt. III.
- "The Scroll of Fasting" was a list of days of the year, arranged by months, form, is probably from the time of Hadrian.
- 20. M.R. Lehman: "IQ Genesis Apocryphon in the light of Targumim and Midrashim", R de Qumran, I (1958) pg. 249-263 (251).

1. M.H. Segal: A Grammar of Mishnaic Hebrew (Oxford, 1927); G. Dalman:

9.

to the Gospels and Acts (Oxford, 1967³)

Jesus, Avhandlinger utgitt av det Norske st.-filos. Klasse, no. 1 (Oslo 1954)

asada", Israel Exploration Journal, 15

ts (Oxford 1965), pg. 14.

ns of Bereschit Rabba, Lunds Universitets , vol. I & II, (Lund 1939).

poken and written language in the last days of Biblicla Literature, 79 (1960), pg. 32-47.

n grammatikalischen Aramaismen im eihefte ZAW 96 (Berlin 1966).

rist and his Apostles; T.K. Abbott: Essays and New Testaments, pg. 129-182.

Palestine (Philadelphia), pg. 67.

t: its background, growth and content ti and J. T. Milik: Gli Scavi del "Dominus o romano (Jerusalem 1958), RB,66 (1959) pg. Language Milieu of First Century Palestine". 5).

New Testament Greek (Cambridge 1963), pg. 192; zig 1929²), pg. 2; Birkeland, op. cit., pg. 16; 111 5.4.

le drei ersten Evangelien (Berlin 1911²); Berlin 1896).

ey: The Aramaic Origin of the Fourth Gospel Lord (Oxford 1925); C.C. Torrey: The Fourth Gospel: A New Translation (Harpers 1933).

when it was not lawful to mourn or fast because these days recorded events in Jewish history when celebration was proper. The text, in its present

Footnotes (cont'd)

- 21. "How splendid and beautiful the form of her face and how.... and how soft the hair of her head; how lovely are her eyes and how pleasant is her nose and all the radiance of her face.... how lovely is her breast and how beautiful is all her whiteness! Her arms, how beautiful! And her hands, how perfect! And how attractive all the appearance of her hands! How lovely (are) her palms, and how long and dainty all the fingers of her hands. Her feet, how beautiful! How perfect are her legs! There are no virgins or brides who enter the bridal chamber more beautiful than she. Indeed her beauty surpasses that of all women. Her beauty is high above all of them. Yet with all this beauty is much wisdom in her; and whatever she has is lovely". (IO Gen. Apoc. XX 2-8).
- 22. E. Y. Kutscher: "The Language of the Genesis Apocryphon", Scripta Hierosylimatana IV (1957), pg. 3.
- 23. G. Vermes: Scripture and Tradition in Judaism (ledien 1962), pg. 111.
- 24. A. T. Olmstead: "Could and Aramaic Gospel be written?", JNES I (1942), pg. 41-75 (pg. 59).
- 25. M. McNamara: The New Testament and the Palestinian Targums to the Pentateuch (Rome 1966), pg. 65.
- 26. M. Ginsburger: Das Fragmententhargum (Berlin 1899), pg. XV.
- 27. Kutscher: op. cit.; P. Wernberg-Møller: Studia Theologica 15 (1961), pg. 128-180; A. Diez Macho: "La Lengua hablada por Jesucristo", Or Ant 2 (1963). pg. 103; G. Vermes: "Haggadah in the Onkelos Targum", JSS 8 (1963), pg. 159-169.
- 27a. P. Kahle: The Cairo Geniza (Oxford 1959²), pg. 194.
- 27b. A. Geiger: Urschrift un Uebersetzungen der Bibel (Frankfurt a/m 1928²), pg. 453.
- 28. P. Kahle: "Das palastinische Pentateuchtargum und das zur Zeit Jesu gesprochene Aramaisch" ZNTW 49:1/2 (1958), pf. 115ff; E. Y. Kutscher: "Das zur Zeit Jesu gesprochene Aramaisch" ZNTW 51:1/2 (1960), pg. 46-54; Kahle's reply in ZNTW 51:1/2 (1960), pg. 55.
- 29. R. le Déaut: Introduction à la littérature rabbinique (Rome 1966), pg. 84.
- 30. A. Marmorstein: Studien zum Pseudo-Jonathan Targum, I:Das Targum und die Apokrypha Literatur (Posen 1905); A.T. Olmstead: op. cit.
- 31. P. Winter: "Luke 2:49 and the Targum Yerushalmi", ZNTW 45(1954), pg. 145-179.
- 32. M. Ginsburger: Pseudo-Jonathan (Berlin 1903), pg. XXI; R. Block: "Notes sur l'utilization des fragments de la Geniza du Caire pour l'étude du targum palestinien", REJ 14(1955), pg. 31; A. Diez Macho: "The Recently discovered Palestinian Targum: its antiquity and relationship with other targums", Vetus Testament Supplement 7 (1960), pg. 239-245.
- 33. G. Vermes: "The Targumic Version of Genesis 4:3-16", The Annual of Leeds University Oriental Society 3 (1961-2) pg. 98.

Footnotes (cont'd)

- 34. P. Kahle: Masoreten des Westens, vol. II, (Stuttgart 1930).
- (July 1962), pg. 19-25.
- A Historiographical Survey (Louvain 1960).
- 37. McNamara: op. cit., pg. 63.
- 38. Le Déaut: op. cit., pg. 122.
- Targums", VT, XV:1 (1965), pg. 16-26 (25).
- 40. Block: op. cit.
- 41. ibid
- 42. LXX: KIBWTOV EK SUNWV TETPAYWVWV ; Vulg.: de lignis laevigatis.
- 43. McNamara: op. cit., pg. 51-52.
- 45. P. Winter: "Notes on Salem, Jerusalem" NT, 2 (1957) 151-152.
- 46. M. Black: NTS, 3 (1956-7) pg. 312.
- 47a. Zeitlin: JQR, 47 (1957), pg. 249.
- 48. Black: NTS, 3 (1956-7), pg. 312.
- Midrasch (Munich 1922ff), vol. I, pg. 254.
- 51. De Decalogo 132ff.
- 52. McNamara: op. cit., pg. 126-131.

35. A. Diez Macho: "The Palestinian Targum", Christian News from Israel, 13:2

36. The Ms was prepared for Egidio i.e. Gilles de Viterbe, vicar-general of the Augustinian Order; cf. G. E. Weil: Elie Lévita, humaniste et massorète (Leiden 1963), pg. 81-82 and F. X. Martin: The Problem of Egidio da Viterbo:

39. M. C. Doubles: "Toward the Publication of the extant text of the Palestinian

44. R. Block: "Notes methodologique pour l'etude de la litterature rabbinique", RSR, 43 (1955) pg. 194-227; and G. Vermes: Scripture and Tradition in Judaism.

47. J. A. Fitzmyer: The Genesis Apocryphon of Qumran Cave I (Rome 1966), pg. 156.

49. H. L. Strack and P. Billerbeck: Kommentar zum Neuen Testament aus Talmud und

50. "'Thou shalt not murder'. Why is it said? Because it says 'whosoever sheds man's blood, etc.' (Gen. 9:6). We have thus (Gen. 9:6) heard the penalty but have not heard the warning; therefore it says here 'Thou shalt not murder'."

II. ABSTRACTS OF PAPERS

(a) The Supposed Adoption - Marriage of Jacob

Several years ago C. Gordon suggested that there was a strong similarity between the marriage customs of Nuzi and Jacob's marriages, based on a comparison between texts of Nuzi (Gadd 51 and HSS 67) and the Genesis story. The Nuzi texts are basically adoption texts to which marraige betweeen the adopted son and the daughter of the adopter is incidental. In the Biblical story of Jacob, however, there is nothing which explicitly suggests that Jacob was adopted by Laban. In fact the following points indicate that Jacob was not adopted.

- a) He paid a bride-price of seven years service for each wife. In no case in the legal texts does an adopted son pay a brideprice.
- b) He has a separate household, but adoption always means that there is only one household until the division of the inheritance. Otherwise the property of the adopted son belongs to the adoptive father's household!
- c) Jacob continues to recognize Isaac as his father and Canaan as his homeland. Laban is never addressed as his father but only as the father of his wives. Adoption implies a complete break with one's natural father and native land.

Since Jacob's adoption cannot be demonstrated the whole comparison with the Nuzi material is without foundation.

John Van Seters, Newtonville, Mass.

(b) The Herald of Good Tidings in Second Isaiah

The figure of the "herald of good tidings" (Heb. = m^ebasser, piel participle from root BSR) occupies a position of crucial importance in Isaiah 40-55 for it is he who announces the climactic core of the prophet's message: the imminent salvation of exiled Israel and the inauguration of the eschatological reign of God. A careful study of the three passages in which he appears (40:9; 41:27; 52:7) shows that this herald is none other than the prophet Second Isaiah himself. This interpretation is especially important for a proper understanding of 40:9 where the predominant view holds that the herald is Zion-Jerusalem. The identification of the prophet as the herald who announces this ultimate good news to the people raises the question of the Sitz im Leben of Second Isaiah, and it is tentatively suggested that the prophet was a kind of cultic prophet who pronounced his oracles within the context of the worshipping congregation.

Robert W. Fisher, Waterloo, Ontario

(c) Romans 6:23a and 6:7

Paul was not a Hellenist. He did not use the Aristotelian category of efficient causality. He was a Hebraist in every fibre of his being. He used the Biblical category of expiation. Death is the EXPIATION of sin. (Romans 6:7). Death is the explation of SIN (Romans 6:23a). The difference is one of emphasis only. Romans 6:23a does NOT contradict Romans 6:7.

(d) Once Again, "The Religion of Israel"

It is remarkable that in the three decades following the appearance of W. Eichrodt's Theology of the Old Testament, very few works on the history of the religion of Israel were produced. In the past seven years four major studies of the latter subject have been published: by Pfeiffer, Renckens, Ringgren, and Vriezen. The paper comments upon this turn of events, briefly evaluates the four books, and reflects on the prospects for future work in the area.

(e) A Twofold Christology in John?

This paper examines the ways in which John attempts to understand the mystery of the person of Jesus. The conclusion is that when the evangelist uses the "Son of Man" figure, and terminology associated with it ("ascending" and "descending", "glorification", and "I am") he is reflecting a primitive, Jewish-inspired Christology notably different from other passages of the gospel in which vertical and automotive language is avoided, the notion of preexistence absent, and divine indwelling substituted for the divine Name. Such divergent Christologies presuppose a process of developing reflection and theologizing still discernible in the pages of the gospel and evident inter alia in the evangelist's twofold eschatology. John often reworks an event or a discourse as his understanding of it progresses. It is suggested here that the twofold stoning of Jesus, the one at 8,59 and the other at 10,31 furnishes us with another doublet illustrative of the two Christologies.

Roy Mason Pounder, Montreal, Quebec

Jared Jackson, Pittsburgh, Penna.

J. E. Bruns, Toronto, Ontario

(f) The Problem of Eschatology in the Old Testament

The study of eschatology in the Old Testament is circumscribed at the present time by divergence of opinions and disagreement among scholars concerning the definition of the concept and its application to the Old Testament. In order to overcome this difficulty, what is needed is an approach that distinguishes between the two aspects of the problem: the definition of eschatology, and the application of this definition to the study of available material. Our present concern will be only to establish a definition.

Due consideration of the present state of scholarly opinion, as well as other factors, suggests that the basic definition of eschatology should be established as: any system of thought that deals with what is ultimate or final. This statement is then further to be limited by the proviso that the concept refers only to the experience of human beings as individuals or societies; and that two other characteristics are tension and absolute change between the present and the future in expectation of the eschaton. These characteristics are expressed in two forms:

- (1) Negative eschatology marked by the termination of the present age in total destruction.
- (2) Positive eschatology marked by the replacing of the present age by one totally different.

P. F. Gilbert, Toronto, Ontario

(g) The Death of Josiah: A Conspiracy of Silence

The death of Josiah was a crushing blow to Israel's hopes, politically and religiously. There was a marked reluctance on everbody's part to comment on the event. Reference in Kings is terse to the point of obscurity, no reference in Lamentations, no pertinent reference in Jeremiah. Even Zech. 12:11 and Rev. 16:16 on examination prove irrelevant. Only the Chronicler re-writes Kings, but draws heavily on the account of the death of Ahab to do so.

The ominous silence that follows the death of Josiah, however, is that of the Hebrew historiographers. Hebrew history had been written on the premise that Yahweh was at work in the events of time, effecting his purpose to establish Israel by rewarding loyalty and punishing defection. Moses and Saul illustrate the difficulty of always making the facts fit the theory; Uzziah and Manasseh provide further examples. But Josiah's death was too blatant and too contemporary an event to be treated in this way (centuries later the Chronicles tried the old formula for meeting the difficulty, but most unconvincingly). History had caught up with Heilsgeschichte and had discredited it. History-writing ceased in Israel. When is resumed (I and II Maccabees) it was on the Greek model. Christian historiographers took up the task (Eusebius to Bossuet) but faltered in the glare of the Enlightenment. Perhaps the time is ripe to suggest that this generation now has the scientific and historical resources to restate the Hebrew 'premise to historiography' as the clue to the meaning of the universe with a new persuasiveness.

(h) The "Hypostasis of the Archons" - A Gnostic Genesis Midrash

Among the hitherto unpublished materials of the Nag Hammadi Gnostic find is a document entitled "Concerning the Hypostasis of the Archons", forming part of the same codex as The Gospel of Thomas and The Gosepl according to Philip.

Together with these two "gospels" this document presumes some knowledge of the biblical material, which it seeks to twist the suit its own idealogical purpose. The Hypostasis is remarkable in that it follows its biblical Vorlage, parts of the Primaeval History in Genesis, far more closely, though with the express purpose of setting forth Gnostic ideology.

It falls into three parts -

- leader, Samuel, is narrated.
- on her and attempt to tyrannize her.

14.

S. B. Frost, Montreal, Quebec

1) A Prologue, in which the author's basic thesis is stated, the conflict between the Powers (exousiai) and the world of the Incorruption, and in which the rebellion and expulsion of their

2) The Genesis Midrash begins with the creation of man by the rebel Archons, then that of Eve, after whom the Archons lust. The serpent is introduced as the deliverer, and Eve and Adam assert their freedom against the usurped dominion of the Archons, who cast them out of paradise in order to retain their power over them. After narrating the Fratricide of Oain and the birth of Seth, the birth of Norea is related. She it is who comes into conflict with Noah when he builds the ark. The archons turn

3) The angel Eleleth delivers Norea, and delivers a summary of the Ophite "party line". It is suggested that this may have been a separate document, since Norea disappears from sight in it.

C. J. deCatanzaro, Peterborough, Ontario

(i) Historicity and Oral Tradition: A Study of the Nature of the Problem and Its Implications.

This paper deals with the question of the historicity of prose narratives, like the Patriarchal legends, which have been transmitted orally. First, the most important discussions and comments on the subject of the historicity of oral tradition are reviewed, mainly the work of Liestl, Vansina and Dorson. The picture is far from complete, but the impression gained is that one must be cautious. However, it seems that one may not prejudge the historicity or lack of historicity of oral narratives with an argument based on the nature of oral tradition. Oral tradition cannot be characterized as necessarily reliable or necessarily unreliable. Secondly, the paper asks whether the question of historicity legends like the Patriarchal narratives has been set in the proper context in Biblical scholarship. It is suggested that to employ a strongly historical approach to the text may unnecessarily or even wrongly predetermine the role of history in the interpretation of the text. If a legend among other things is a literary work which is understood and appreciated and understood in many contexts other than the "original" setting, some attention should be paid to the appropriate way of interpreting literary works before articulating the relationship of such works to the "original" context in which they may have arisen.

Robert C. Culley

(j) Acts 2: The Solution to a Problem

The writer adopts the stance that Luke may be a better historian than is commonly believed. The hermeneutical principle, that in any apparent discrepancy between Paul's epistles and Luke-Acts the former must always be correct, is challenged. As an example an examination is made of the problem of "glossolalia" as it is found in I Cor. 12-14 and Acts 2. In the latter Luke is commonly said to have recast his sources to suit his theological purpose since Paul refers only to ecstatic utterance and Luke says that foreign languages were also a part of the experience at Pentecost. Illustrations from current examples of glossolalia which include both forms are cited to support the view that Luke, may be as accurate a reporter of what happened in tongue-speaking, as Paul.

R. E. Osborne, Toronto, Ontario

(k) New Parable Interpretation

With reference back to Julicher's important work on the parables, the work of Dodd Parables of the Kingdom, 1935, is suggested as marking a new era in parable interpretation. This is supported by quotations from Jeremias Parables of Jesus, E.T.1953. A new line of treatment seeems to be indicated by appeal to the parables by Fuchs as original with Jesus and containing an implicit Christology. This is made much more definite in D.O.Via's, The Parables 1967 which speaks of an existential interpretation distinguishable from, but continuous with, the historical interpretation of Dodd, Jeremias and orthodox Gospel research. This existentialist interpretation is the real end-term of the process, and the historical interpretation is only a halfway house. Reference is also made to G.V.Jones, The Art and Truth of the Parables, 1964, which has much in common with Via, though not so subservient to Heidegger and Bultmann. The tendency of this new methodology to de-historicise should be watched, but full credit must be given for its acquaintance with the attention studies in general literature are giving to metaphor and symbolism. Amos Wilder has expertise here, but N.T.scholars ought not to leave him so isolated in this field.

Cyril Blackman, Toronto, Ontario

III. PROCEEDINGS OF THE SOCIETY

The 36th annual meeting of the Canadian Society of Biblical Studies was held concurrently with the 29th annual meeting of the Canadian Section of the Society of Biblical Literature, May 14-16, 1968, at St. Michael's College, Toronto, Ontario. Also meeting at this time were the Canadian Society of Church History and the Canadian Theological Society.

The business meeting was opened by the President, Professor Ernest G. Clarke, at 9:00 p.m., May 14, 1968.

The minutes of the 1967 meeting were adopted.

The following members had sent regrets at not being able to attend: Charles P. Anderson, Elias Andrews, J.D.F. Beattie, John R. Cameron, Robert M. Clark, Edward J. Crowley, Paul-Eugène Dion, Eldon R. Hay, J. B. Hibbitts, Morley F. Hodder, Jan A. Huntjens, D. R. Huston, J. G. Janzen, Sidney Jellicoe, Hanna E. Kassis, Harry Kuntz, Margot Lads, André Legault, M. R. B. Lovesey, Hubert J. McAvoy, V. E. McEachern, Kikuo Matsuwaga, Helen Milton, Gerald E. Moffatt, Roy Pounder, Mary E. Russell, R. B. Scott, Doreen Smith, Phyllis Smyth, Rolland E. Wolfe.

Professors Macpherson, Hurd and North were appointed to the Nominating Committee.

Professors Lutz and Osborne were appointed Auditors.

Professor Robert Funk, Executive Secretary of SBL was recognized and welcomed as a guest. Professor Funk was invited to address the meeting, bringing the members up-to-date information on developments in SBL.

The Secretary offered an extended report on activities of his office and future prospects for the Society.

1) The Secretary congratulated President Clarke on the receipt of a Canada Council grant to represent CSBS at the Old Testament Congress in Rome, 1968.

The award reflects well on the Society as well as on Professor Clarke.

2) The sale of Canadian Biblical Studies during the year was noted by the Secretary. Initial response to an ad in JBL was not impressive, although requests have continued to trickle in.

3) Relationships with other sections in SBL and with other Learned Societies in Canada are to be re-examined. Prior to the 1968 meeting in California, the Secretary plans to meet in Winnipeg and Vancouver to obtain first-hand knowledge of the views of members across the country. An ad-hoc committee consisting of Professors Winnett, Culley, Clarke, Funk and Wagner was appointed to make a recommendation re meeting with other Learned Societies in Canada. The recommendation adopted by the Society at a subsequent session was that the Executive seek to enter into joint meetings on a trial basis with the general Learned Societies.

On a motion by Professor McCullough, seconded by Professor Macpherson, the Executive was instructed to invite SBL for the 1969 meeting on the best date available.

On a motion by Professor Osborne, seconded by Professor Van Seters, Dean U. S. Leupold was nominated to the Editorial Committee of The Canadian Journal of Theology.

Professor Osborne presented the Auditors' report indicating that the books are in good order. Seconded by Professor Culley, the report was adopted and is included here for information.

> Carried forward 1967 dues 1968 dues Canadian Biblical Stu Interest Exchange

Expenses

Ad in JBL Stencils & product Secretary's expent Typing-Canadian Biblical Mailing

Balance

Mrs. Libby Garschowit Mr. John S. Holladay, Dr. John C. Hurd, Jr. Dr. Martin Kessler, H Mr. Keith Knights, Wa Mr. James McLean, Van Rev. Robert Reid, Tor Mr. J. Immanuel Schoo Professor Larry Toomb Dr. Allison Albert Tr

The above individuals were received as new members.

| | $213.22 | | | | |
|------------------------|----------|--------|-------|----------|--|
| | 52.00 | | | | |
| | 156.00 | | | | |
| udies | 8.00 | | | | |
| | 8.32 | | | | |
| | . 16 | | | | |
| | 437.70 | | | $437.70 | |
| | $ 27.13 | | | | |
| ction | 48.75 | | | | |
| nses | 25.00 | | | | |
| 1 Studies | 40.00 | | | | |
| | 22.47 | | | | |
| | 163.35 | | | $163.35 | |
| | | | | $274.35 | |
| tz, Downs | | | | | |
| , Jr., To ., Toront | | |). | | |
| Potsdam, | | | | | |
| aterloo, | | | | | |
| ncouver, | | Columb | oia. | | |
| ronto, On | | | | | |
| chet, Dow | | | | | |
| bs, Vanco | | | | | |
| rites, Wo | liville, | Nova | SCOTI | 3. | |
| | | | | | |

Professor Macpherson presented the report of the Nominating Committee resulting in the election of the following Executive Committee:

| President- | Professor George Taylor, Winnipeg, Manitoba. |
|----------------------|--|
| Vice-President- | Professor Robert Schnell, Saskatoon, Saskatchewan. |
| Secretary-Treasurer- | Professor Norman E. Wagner, Waterloo Lutheran University, Waterloo, Ontario. |
| Members-at-Large- | Professor R. C. Culley, Montreal Professor J. E. Bruns, Toronto. |

A motion thanking the hosts at St. Michaels and Victoria Universities was unanimously adopted. It was generally agreed that a very worthwhile meeting had been held.

> Respectfully submitted, Norman E. Wagner, Secretary-Treasurer.

Comments.

Presidential Address - Appendix

| MT | 0 | Ps.J | Fg.T | N | I Q Gen. Apoc XIX 20 |
|---|--|---|--|---|------------------------------------|
| 1) Gen.12:13 Say, I pray thee that you are my sister | | Say, I pray thee that you are my sister | Say, I pray∖thee that you are my sister | Say about me that you are my sister | Say about me that he is my brother |
| 2) Gen.6: 13 an ark of gopher wood (ヿクヿ) | an ark of cedar trees (というしょう) | an ark of cedar wood (مجمر ال | an ark of cedar trees (إ דר د ון) | an ark of cedar trees (קדרינוך) | Nglan ark of cedar trees (|
| between the herdsmen of | Now there was a quarrel between the herdsmen of Abram's cattle and the herdsmen of Lot's cattle | between the herdsmen of Abram's flock and the | Now there was a quarrel between the herdsmen of Abram's herds and the herdsmen of Lot's herds for Abram's herdsmen | Now there was a contest between the herdsmen of Abram's cattle and the herdsmen of Lot's cattle Abram's herdsmen | quarrel flocks |
| | | and they were muzzling their cattle lest they eat stolen food until they came to their grazing place Now Lot's herdsmen were | were muzzling their cattle until the time came when they reached the grazing place Now Lot's herdsmen were | were muzzling their cattle until the time when they reached the grazing place Now Lot's herdsmen were | |
| | | letting the herd graze unmuzzled going and eating in the fields of the Canaanites and the | | not muzzling their cattle but were letting their | muzzling on the march |
| | | Perizzites | but the herdsmen of Abram the righteous were muzzling with their bridles and were not fight- ing either the Canaanites | but Abram's herdsmen were command by Abram their Lord saying: you shall no encamp with the Canaanite and Perizzites | it. |
| the Canaanites and the Perizzites were then dwelling in the land. | the Canaanites and the Perizzites were then dwelling in the land. | for unto then they were dwelling in the land. | nor the Perizzites for unto then they were in possession of the land. | until then they were in possession of the land. | for until |

| MT | 0 | Ps.J | Fg.T | N | I Q Gen. Apoc XIX 2 |
|---------------------------|--|--|--|------------------------------|---------------------|
| 4) Gen. 14:4 | The law we are they convod | The lue wears they says 1 | | Twelve years they served | |
| | Twelve years they served Chedor-laomer and in the | Twelve years they served Chedor-laomer and in the | om | Chedorlaomer and in the | |
| | thirteenth they rebelled. | thirteenth they rebelled. | | thirteenth they rebelled | |
| they mahallad | thirteenth they reberred. | enfreenen eney reberred. | | | against him. |
| they rebelled. | | | | agarnet mm. | against mm. |
| 5) Gen. 14:14 | | | | | |
| that his kinsman has | that his kinsman was | that his kinsman was taken | om | that Lot his nephew | Ng1 |
| been taken captive, he | taken captive | captive, then he armed the | | was taken captive, then | |
| mustered his retainers | | lads who were trained for war | | | from the increase o |
| born into his household, | | from the numbers of his house- | | reared in his household | his household. |
| numbering 318, and went | | hold. But they did not wish | | | But they did not |
| in pursuit as far as Dan. | | to go with him and so he chose | | | wish to go with him |
| | | from them Eleazar bar Nimrod | | | and so Eleazer was |
| | | who was comparable in strength | | | chosen from them |
| | | to all of them. | | | for he was from Dan |
| 6) Gen. 14:18 | N | N | N N 1 1 1 1 1 1 | | equal to 318. |
| And Melchizedek, king of | | Now the upright king, that is | Now Melchizedek, | Now the upright king, | |
| | king of Jerusalem, brought | Shem, son of Noah, King of | king of Jerusalem | king of Jerusalem, that | |
| and wine | out bread and wine | Jerusalem went out before Abram | | is the great Shem, | |
| | | and brought out for him | Shem, was priest of | | |
| | 1.1 | bread and wine | the Most High, | househt aut board and | giving food and |
| he was a priest of God | and he was serving be- | at that time he was serving | brought out food and | brought out bread and | drink to Abram and |
| Most High. | fore God Most High. | before God Most High. | wine | wine | to all the men |
| | | | and was standing and | he was a priest serving | who were with him. |
| | | | serving as high priest God Most High. | O I | And he was a priest |
| | | | God Most High. | beibre God Most High. | to God Most High. |
| 7) Gen. 15:1 | | | | | |
| After these things | After these things | After these things when the | After these things when | After these things when | |
| | | kings | all the kings of the | all the kingdoms of the | |
| | | | earth and all the rulers | earth | |
| | | | of the provinces | | |
| | | were gathered together | were gathered together | were gathered together | |
| | | | to make war with Abram | and had drawn up in | |
| | | | the righteous | battle lines before | |
| | | and had fallen before | and he (!) had fallen | Abram and had fallen | |
| | | Abram and he had killed | before him and he had | before him and he had killed | 1 |
| | | them | killed 4 of their kings | 4 of their kings and had re- | |
| | | and he restored | and had restored 9 of the | stored 9 of the princes | |
| | | 9 of the princes Abram | princes Abram the righteous | Abram repented in his heart | |
| | | repented in his heart and said: | | | |
| | | "Woe now to me lest I receive | Woe now upon me lest I receive | 'Woe now upon me lest I | |
| | | a reward in this | a reward | receive a reward in this | |
| | | | | | |

| MT | 0 | Ps.J | Fg.T | N |
|--|---|--|--|---|
| | | world for charity and I have no portion in the world to come; or, lest the brothers | in this world for charity and I have no portion in the world to come; or, | in this world for charity and I have no portion in the world to come; or, |
| | | and relatives of these killed | lest the brothers and relatives of these killed | lest the brothers or relatives of these killed who fell before me and were in their villages and in |
| | | come and join with legions and come against me; or lest in that time he find with me a reward of little merits and they fell before me; | come and join themselves with many legions; or lest he find for me merit in the former time when they fell before me; | their provinces come and join themselves with many legions and come or, lest (there be) little charity which was in my hand in former time when they fell before me and were lifted up for me; |
| | | and in the second time he did not find with me the reward and so the name of heaven is profaned through me and therefore | or lest he did not find for me, in the second time, | or lest he did not find in my hand charity in the second time and so the name of heaven is profaned through me |
| the word of the Yahweh came to Abram in a vision saying: "Fear not, Abram | the word of Yahweh was to Abram in a vision saying "do not fear, oh Abram, | the word of Yahweh was with Abram in a vision saying "do not fear, oh Abram although they are | the word came from before Yahweh with Abram the righteous saying "do not fear, oh Abram although the brothers and relatives of these killed come | the word of the prophecy was from before Yahweh to Abram the righteous saying "do not fear, oh Abram although they are |
| | | joining with legions and coming against you | and join with themselves many legions | joining many legions and coming against you to kill those who are haughty to you |
| I am a shield to you | my word is a shield to you | my word is a shield to you and even though they are falling before you in | my word shall surround you in this world and a shield upon you all | for he is to shield to you in this world |
| | | this world | the day however | and even though I hand over to you men who are speaking evil against you in this world |
| your reward | your reward is | a reward for your doing good worth observing and they are being established before me | your reward and good deeds are being established for you | the reward for your good deeds are being established for you |
| shall be very great. | very much. | the world to come very much. | in the world to come. | before me in the world to come. |

| MT | 0 | Ps.J | Fg.T | N | |
|-------------------------|---------------------------|----------------------------|---|---|-----|
| 8) Gen. 6:8 | | | | | |
| But Noah found favour | Noah found favour before | Noah who was righteous | And Noah, because he was | And Noah, because there was | Ng1 |
| with the lord. | Yahweh. | found grace before | gracious in his generation, | none righteous in his gen- | |
| | | Yahweh. | found grace and hesed before Yahweh. | eration, found grace and hesed before Yahweh. | he |
| 9) Gen. 9:6 | | | | | |
| Whoever sheds the blood | Whoever sheds the blood | Whoever sheds the blood | Whoever spills the blood | Whoever spills the blood | |
| of man | of man, | of man, | of man | of man | |
| | with witnesses, according | with witnesses the judges | | | |
| | to the sentence of the | shall declare him guilty | | | |
| | judge, | of murder. | | | |
| by man shall his blood | shall his blood be shed; | And whoever (sheds the | by the hands of man shall | by the hands of man shall | |
| be shed; | | blood of man) without | his blood be spilt; | his blood be spilt; | |
| | | witnesses, the Lord of the | | | |
| | | world shall require | | | |
| | | recompense from him on the | | | |
| | | great day of judgement; | | | |
| for in the image of | for in the image of God | for in the likeness of God | for in the likeness of | for in the likeness of Yahweh | |
| God was man created. | He made man. | He made man. | Yahweh | He created man. | |
| | | | He created man. | | |